Indiana University – School of Public and Environmental Affairs
Bloomington, IL

SPEA's Master of Public Affairs (MPA) offers an applied focus that teaches students to address society's complex economic, political, legal, and social issues that encompass public service. SPEA offers an array of concentrations. Environmental Policy and Nonprofit Management are considered to be the best in the nation (US News & World Report). The most recent ranking also listed SPEA's Public Financial Management and Public Management concentrations in the top three. Come learn about our newest concentrations: Sustainability and Sustainable Development, Energy, and International Development! SPEA's Master of Science in Environmental Science (MSES) was one of the first of its kind to be developed. It is considered to be one of the top environmental science programs in the country by the Council of Environmental Deans and Directors (CEDD). The MSES bridges the applied disciplines of chemistry, civil engineering, biology, and geology. The MSES is also part of a unique five-semester dual degree option within the School that combines the MSES with the MPA (MPA-MSES). The School is also pleased to offer two new dual degree options: MSES-Chemistry and MSES-Physics. These new programs offer you the opportunity to obtain a dual degree in each discipline in only two years. SPEA also houses the Master of Arts in Arts Administration (MAAAA) degree. The goal of the program is to not only give students the skills needed to manage in the creative sector, but also to foster the understanding that in the art world nothing is static. Technology, society, economy, and art will shift in ways no one can predict. Arts organizations need leaders who can develop and articulate vision and strategy and navigate the changing currents while preserving core values. Combining faculty and practical expertise with the astonishing variety of cultural offerings on campus and in Bloomington, students can look forward to an intellectually and culturally stimulating experience in the study and practice of arts management, while preparing themselves for leadership in the arts in the decades ahead.

Monterey Institute of International Studies (Middlebury)
Monterey, CA

The Monterey Institute of International Studies, a graduate school of Middlebury College, provides international professional education in areas of critical importance to a rapidly changing global community, including international policy and management, translation and interpretation, language teaching, sustainable development, and non-proliferation. We prepare students from all over the world to make a meaningful impact in their chosen fields through degree programs characterized by immersive and collaborative learning, and opportunities to acquire and apply practical professional skills. Our students are emerging leaders capable of bridging cultural, organizational, and language divides to produce sustainable, equitable solutions to a variety of global challenges.

Princeton University – Woodrow Wilson School of Public and International Affair
Princeton, NJ

Princeton's Woodrow Wilson School is a graduate professional school of public and international affairs with a specific mission to prepare students for careers of public service in public agencies, non-profit organizations, and multilateral institutions. Our financial aid policy provides full tuition fellowships ($40,500) to all graduate students and 90% receive full stipends ($21,500) for living expenses. This enables our students to graduate without loan indebtedness and pursue the careers for which they are most passionate: urban policy, human rights, microfinance, health policy, economic justice, state and local finance, inequality, international trade, financial markets, science and environmental policy, demography, infectious disease, forced migration, global challenges (to mention just a few) as well as core skills in economic, quantitative, political and behavioral analysis. The Master's in Public Affairs degree offers four concentrations: International Relations, International Development, Domestic Policy and Economics and Public Policy. For fall 2012, 73 first year students enrolled: 7% with less than two years of work experience, 25% with 2-3 years, 22% - 4 years, 15% 5 years, and 31% 6 or more years.

University of Maryland – School of Public Policy
College Park, MD

The Maryland School of Public Policy offers masters degrees in public policy and public management designed to meet the unique needs of the many different students attracted to international and public service. We have specializations in: International Security and Economic Policy/ International Development/ Environmental Policy/ Social Policy/ Education Policy/ Health Policy/ Public Sector Financial Management / Leadership and Management / Federal Acquisitions
Management / Focus in Non-profit Management / Graduates go on to work in the public sector, non-profits, NGOs and private industry.

University of Pennsylvania – School of Social Policy & Practice
Philadelphia, PA

Penn’s School of Social Policy & Practice offers five degree programs: Master of Social Work (MSW), Master of Science in Social Policy, Master of Science in Nonprofit Leadership, Clinical Doctorate in Social Work (DSW), and PhD in Social Welfare. The School prepares students to address micro and macro societal problems at the local, national and international level; and has developed a philosophy that stresses a fundamental commitment to social justice and the elimination of all forms of social oppression. This philosophy, which is a continuously evolving dogma, shapes the educational programs Penn offers, the research it undertakes, and the leadership it provides to the profession.