Studio City, California (Los Angeles)

Studio City is one of 24 named communities in the San Fernando Valley, which are part of the incorporated City of Los Angeles. Only 12 miles northwest of the Los Angeles Civic Center, Studio City is nestled in the foothills of the north slope of the Santa Monica Mountains, a prime location for easy access to employment centers in Hollywood, Downtown, the Valley and Beverly Hills. The Ventura Freeway from Los Angeles and the San Diego Freeway from the coastal cities gives easy access to all of Southern California. It is easy to get around in Studio City and the surrounding areas by using the Metro Bus and Rail lines.

Jacksonville, Florida

Jacksonville, the largest city in the continental US, has beautiful beaches, a large music scene (including a summer beach jazz festival), theatre, and so much more. Downtown Jacksonville offers many unique, affordable options to get from point A to point B and back again. Three historic trolleys provide free transportation around the Downtown area, including transportation to the Sports Complex. A 2.5-mile skywalk is an automated transit system operating on an elevated track with 10 two-car trains. This convenient service provides transportation to the North- and Southbanks of Downtown throughout the week and during special events.

New York, New York

New York is a hotspot of art, music, theater, and exciting free summer events. If you can’t walk to your destination, mass transit (subway or bus system) is the next best way to get around. The city’s rail and bus system is run by the Metropolitan Transportation Authority (MTA) and is inexpensive, environmentally friendly, and a great way to see the sights throughout the five boroughs — and it operates 24/7! Biking the city is good for the environment and your body, and it can often be faster and cheaper than fuel-powered transportation. Cycling hotspots like Central, Riverside, and Prospect Parks as well as bike paths along the Hudson and East Rivers and many bridges are among the great options for hitting the city on two wheels. With plenty of new bike lanes, parts of Broadway in Times Square car-free, and the new Citibike system, all of New York is bike-able.

Washington, D.C.

Washington, D.C. is a vibrant city filled with historical monuments, art, culture, and great food. The heart of D.C.’s public transportation is the MetroRail system. It provides service to the entire metro area and has numerous stations within walking distance of museums, monuments, and other places of interest. It’s generally safe, clean, and easy to use, and it has reasonable fares. Coupled with the MetroRail system is the MetroBus system. Since 2008, Capital Bikeshare has created over 300 stations around the area, offering on-demand transportation for cheap. Pick up a bike at any station and drop it off at another close to your destination.

San Francisco, California

San Francisco residents can take part in a wide assortment of community clubs, organizations, and activities including interest groups, clubs, hobbies, community centers, and sporting events and activities. Established by voter proposition in 1999, the San Francisco Municipal Transportation Agency (SFMTA) oversees both the Municipal Railway (Muni) and the Department of Parking and Traffic. With five modes of transit, Muni has about 700,000 passengers boarding each day.

Philadelphia, Pennsylvania

One of the most historic cities in America, Philadelphia is an ideal place to spend a weekend – preferably a long one. Be sure to see the Liberty Bell and Independence Hall, where the Constitution and Declaration of Independence were signed. Both are part of Independence National Historic Park. Philadelphia also boasts some outstanding art museums, including the Rodin Museum. The Franklin Institute Science Museum is one of the many area attractions honoring the life and work of Benjamin Franklin, the city’s most famous ambassador. After digesting all of that history, be sure to save room for a classic Philly cheesesteak.
