Direct Student Loan Definitions (subsidized and unsubsidized):

A Direct Subsidized Loan is need-based. Need is determined according to Federal Methodology based on the information submitted on the FAFSA. With a subsidized loan, the federal government pays the interest during in-school and other applicable deferment periods. The interest rate for Direct Subsidized Loans disbursed in 2012-2013 is 6.8%. Direct Unsubsidized Loans are available up to a student's grade level maximum regardless of need. However, the borrower is responsible for paying the interest that accrues while in school. The borrower has the option of allowing the interest to be capitalized and added to the loan principal while attending college. The interest rate for Direct Unsubsidized Loans disbursed in 2012-2013 is 6.8%.
